

*Saddened by the fact that the next act would be last,
The twelve poo pups cheered up a bit, reviewing all acts past.
And then of course, the good news, there was still one act to go.
He was the black and white furred boy who wore the big black bow.*

*He wasn't very active and never ran that much.
But oh my gosh the best of fun to cuddle with and touch.
His favorite was to watch and learn all sorts of different things.
Exactly how he knows to grab the phone each time it rings.*

Compared to all the others, his act was not exciting,
But to a human with a need, it was brilliant and inviting.
Just about to start his act in the Poodle talent show,
He noticed Deja missing and said, "Where did Deja go?"

He sniffed her out and found her all alone and in a pout.
And promptly said with great concern,
"So what's this all about?"
So thankful she'd been noticed, which led her to explain,
"I'm not a poodle puppy who wishes to complain.
But as I have a show career, I didn't get a bow,
And that's ok, but now it seems, I'm not part of the show!"

*After a few moments of some serious contemplation,
The little boy then perfectly resolved the situation.
“An oversight, perk up”, said he “I’ll share my show with you.
Just follow me Miss Deja and repeat all that I do.”
With this heartfelt gesture, he’d made a sharing plan.
This little boy was actually a gallant poodle man!
And with his caring gesture, Deja felt her spirits lifted.
In the skill of helping others, he was obviously so gifted.*

To prepare, the little boy whispered into Deja's ear,
To reaffirm a game plan, so their act would be quite clear.

After this rehearsal they began to show their skills,
An act perhaps more practical with not as many thrills.

They ran retrieving slippers, and then a pair of shoes.
Next pushed the channel changer to view cartoons and news.
